While there have been informal meetings between the two sides on this issue, no formal decision has been made.

According to the Oslo accords, those talks are to begin on May 4 and conclude no later than May 1999. Some believe opening the talks before the election on May 29 could provide the Peres government with an unwanted photo-opportunity, since Israel has agreed to negotiate the future of Jerusalem.

A source close to Arafat said last night, "This issue of when final status talks begin is a nonissue. It should not matter when the talks begin, as it is known to Arafat and others that there will be no progress on the eve of an Israeli election."

Buchanan won a razor-thin victory in New Hampshire's Republican presidential scramble on Tuesday, leading his chief rival, Sen. Robert Dole, to call the contest for the Republican nomination "a race between the mainstream and the extreme."

Buchanan recently shied away from anti-Israel, antisemitic, and Holocaust-denial rhetorie, and has not been speaking of "Christian values," said Ahraham Foxman, national director of the Anti-Defamation League.

"The fact still remains that be has never retracted, repudiated, or apologized for the hateful and painful language of the past," Foxman said. "When challenged to do so, he defends it."

Because of their special tax status, most Jewish organizations are constrained from intervening directly or indirectly in political campaigns, and could not comment directly on the Bucbanan

Most seemed to believe Buchanan is unlikely to win the presidenial nomination, but they noted that his victory would give him a painfully prominent role in shaping the Republican platform.

Last week, the co-chairman of Buchanan's campaign, Larry Pratt, stepped down after reports that he had shared a podium with white supremacists. Jewish observers were concerned that Buchanan did not denounce his

A complete but unofficial count yesterday showed Buchanan won 27 percent of the vote, followed by Dole with 26%, and former Tennessee governor La-mar Alexander with 23%.

Magazine publisher Steve Forbes was humbled by a distant fourth-place finish, with 12%.

"The danger is not whether he gets the nomination - which I don't think he can get - but how he will influence the agenda. BATSHEVA TSUR

A SEVEN-year-old boy and a 70year-old guard were mauled and severely injured by a pack of rottweilers in Bnei Brak

Late last night, Tel Aviv veterinarians were still looking for one of the dogs, which apparently had escaped.

Schools in the neighborhood will strike tomorrow from 8 to 10 in protest.

The incident began shortly after noon, when Oshri Tsuberi, a pupil at the Beit Hinuch Talmud Torah was heading home from school. The rottweilers were apparently roaming unleashed in a field close to the school.

According to Oshri's mother, the boy, who was fond of dogs. went up to pet one of them when the pack suddenly pounced on

"There were at least four dogs," school principal Moshe Klein told Israel Radio. "They attacked and mauled the boy all over, particularly on his face. Some other children heard his shouts and called us.'

Meanwhile, Yosef Laks, the guard at the nearby ORT school, heard the boy's cries and ran up to help him. Laks was also severely injured, hut managed to extricate the child. Both were rushed to the Rabin Medical Center-Beilinson Campus in Petab Tikva.

"I saw four or five dogs eating up the boy." Laks told Channel 1 from his hospital bed. "I was attacked myself m the leg. I put my hand down and felt the dog had a bit of flesh in his mouth. Never mind, the main thing is that the boy was not eaten up.'

Klein said that the dogs were driven off with a stick hy the guard from the Talmud Torah who arrived a short while later. Meanwhile, police shot at the dogs, killing two of them, hut the others ran off in different directions.. Two others were eventually caught and impounded. The dogs' owner was detained for questioning.

Klein placed responsibility on Acting Mayor Amos Mar-Haim. saying that the municipal inspectors had known that wild dogs roamed the field close to the

He also said Shahal had promised to close Orient House several times in the past. Olmert also repeated his stand that independent advisers had said such a closure would not affect the peace process. He said the government could not avoid discussing Jerusalem's status, as it is required to do so by a clause in the Olso Accords. "but they might ask to put the discussions off until after the elections."

German FM delays visit until after elections

DAVID MAKOVSKY and news agencies

GERMAN Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel has decided to postpone bis visit to Israel planned for March 3rd until after the elections here. Foreign Ministry officials said last night. We received word this afternoon from Bonn that Kinkel is not coming because of the elections here," one official said last night. Germany apparently wanted to avoid being put in the position whereby Kinkel could not visit the Orient House due to the new order issued by Internal Security Minister Moshe Shahal. The European Union has a policy whereby all foreign ministers who visit Israel must pay a so-called "courtesy call" at Orient House. German officials also do not want to stage a confrontation with the Peres government on this issue. fearing it will only play into the hands of the Likud.

The US, meanwhile, tried yesterday to avoid getting dragged into the dispute over whether Israel should prevent foreign ministers from visiting Orient House.

"This is a question that, really, the Israelis and Palestinians have to work uut. They now have direct lines of communication with each other," State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns told reporters. "I think the time has come, probably, not to expect others to work out all of these problems, hut to have them work their problems out directly." he said.

American Jewish support for peace process up since Rabin assassination

MARILYN HENRY NEW YORK

IN the aftermath of the assassinatioo of prime minister Yitzhak Rabin, support for the Israeli-Arab peace process has increased significantly among American Jews, the Americao Jewish Committee announced yesterday.

In a survey conducted last month, 75 percent of American Jews said they support the handling of the peace negotiations with the Palestinians, as compared with 64% in September 1995. In addition, 70% said they supported the handling of the talks with Syria, against 61% last Sepiember.

A large majority said they had a favorable impression of Prime Minister Shimon Peres, while their impressions of opposition leader Binyamin Netanyahu were evenly divided, the survey showed.

However, as was the case with previous surveys, American Jewish views of Israeli leaders had to be qualified by the fact that 53% were unaware that Peres and Netanyahu are in different parties. The survey was the fourth in a series on American Jewish opinion about Israel and the peace process, which began in September 1993, immediately after the signing of the Israel-PLO accord. A demographically representative national sample of 1,013 self-identified Jewish respondents was interviewed by telephone January 10-16.

While a majority of American Orthodox Jews continue to oppose the peace process, the level of opposition among the Orthodox has declined. In January, 56% of the Orthodox said they opposed the government's current handling of the peace negotiations with the Arabs, compared with 64% in September 1995. Among other findings:- A large majority continue to believe that the PLO is not doing enough to control Palestinian extremist elements, like Hamas.- A majority opposes amending the Law of Return to ban Jewish political extremists from the country.- A large majority believes that Reform and Conservative conversions conducted in Israel should be recognized on a par with Orthodox conversions.

MDA wants Messala off panel probing Ethiopian blood flap

David Adom's director of blood services, yesterday petitioned the High Court of Justice against the committee investigating MDA's policy of not using blood from Ethiopian donors.

The committee, which was appointed by Prime Minister Shimon Peres, is to hold its first meeting today. The petition, filed by automey Uzi Azmon, argued first of all that the presence on the committee of Addisu Messala, head of the Unified Ethiopian Immigrants Association, is improper. Azmon noted that Messala has repeatedly been quoted in the press blaming Ben-David for the policy and demanding that he be fired. Since one of the committee's jobs is to determine who was responsible for the policy, it is improper to have someone sitting on it who has already made up his mind on the committee is not equipped to investigate the matter properly, because it has no authority to subpoena witnesses or material, and can impose no penalties for perjury. Since the Health Ministry is trying to make Ben-David its scapegoat, the chance exists that various people will refuse to testify or conceal relevant information. Azmon said. Therefore, the committee should be replaced with a full-fledged state commission of inquiry, which does have the power to subpoepa witnesses and material. the petition said.

The committee is also technically illegal, Azmon argued, because investigative committees can be set up only by each minister in his area of responsibility. Blood services certainly do not fall into Peres's builtiwick, so he had no authority to establish this commit-

Farmers in line Liba'i: Split to receive subsidies

THE Agriculture and Finance ministries will work out a plan to subsidize tomato and cucumber growers, Prime Minister Shimon Peres decided yesterday at the end of a meeting on the difficult market conditions.

Tomato and cucumber growers have suffered from a drop in prices over the past year as a result of Palestinian produce flooding the market, and also from a 10 percent growth in crop

Agriculture Minister Ya'acov Tzur proposed that the government stop helping farmers remove surplus tomatoes and cucumbers and start giving them a supplementary income according to previous production volumes. In addition, the government will encourage farmers to stop growing vegetables and move to other

Earlier this week hundreds of Israeli farmers dumped crates of tomatoes and set tires on fire at the Nahal Oz checkpoint to protest the sale of Palestinian veg-

Buchanan win could split Republicans

MANCHESTER, N.H. (Reuter) -By winning the New Hampshire primary, fiery populist Pat Buchanan has dealt a severe, pos-sibly crippling blow to Bob Dole's presidential bopes while driving a stake through the heart of Republican party unity, politi-cal analysts said on Tuesday. Buchanan's upset victory over Dole, the Senate majority leader and longtime favorite for the Republican presidential nomination, will send a shot around the nation and the world.

"We're giving a voice to the voiceless, we speak out for those who have no representatives." Buchanan said in his victory speech. "We're going to go to Washington and we'll be the lobbyists for those who don't have a lobbyist in Washington, D.C."

We're on the verge of taking back our party." he added, "We're on the verge of taking it back as a prelude to taking back our country, a prefude to taking back the destiny of America.

Political analyst Kevin Phillips said Dole's bid for the Republican presidential nuation to face President Bill Clinton in the November election was still very much alive because of his superior organization and financial

But he faces an uphill fight against Buchanan and former Tennessee Governor Lamar Alexander, who came in third in New Hampshire and will try to portray Dole as a loser.

"Buchanan is still not the tavorite." said Phillips. "There will be a counter-offensive by the Republican establishment, including all the Republican governors and big business, who will anempt to rally around Dole."

While the Republicans rip themselves apart, Clinton is unopposed for the Democratic nomination and currently leads all his prospective Republican challengers in the polls.

Phillips and several other analysis interviewed by Reuters doubted Buchanan could win the Republican nomination. The analysts said he is too divisive and past allegations - which he vehemently denies - that he is anti-women and antisemitic are certain to re-emerge with new

Jack Pitney, a former White House official in the Republican Reagan administration, now with Claremont McKenna College in California, said Buchanan's victory spelled one word for the Republican Party - "pain!"
While Buchanan's total opposi-

Buchanan said yesterday. The previous day, he declared:

"The establishment in Washington is quaking in its boots... They hear the shouts of the peasunts over the hill. All the peasants are coming with pitchforks. We're going over the top.

War tribunal to indict Bosnian Moslems

PARIS (AP) - The UN war crimes tribunal for former Yugoslavia is looking beyond Bosnia's Serbs and soon will indict the first ; Moslem suspects, its president. said yesterday.

Antonio Cassese told reporters that the indictments against Moslem suspects would be handed down "in a few weeks." He did not say how many suspects would be charged or provide details about the atrocities.

Investigators working from 17. grainy photographs of alleged war crimes suspects and victims have been hampered by the poor quality of the photos, he said.

There are many logistical and technical problems, said Cassese, visiting Paris and other European capitals to get more money for the tribunal.

The UN court, based in The Hague, has indicted 52 people -45 Serbs and seven Croats. The Serbs include Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and his malitary chief, Gen. Ratko Mladic; but only one minor Bosnian Serb player, Dusan Tadic, is in custody.

From the start, the tribunal had said it also would examine allegations against Moslems. But its focus has been on alleged atrocities committed by the Serbs, and no Moslems have yet been indicted.

Yesterday's announcement that Moslems definitely would be indicted was seen as an attempt to :: reassure the Bosnian Serbs that the tribunal won't overlook Moslem atrocities.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) -Jumpy policemen fired into a Carnival crowd after a man pulled out a gun near a float yesterday, creating a panic in which two people were killed and more than 50 injured.

It was unclear yesterday who shot the fatal bullets. Witnesses: said armed civilians were firing at ... police, and six officers were among the injured.

Haitian state television was broadcasting live the end of the three-day Carnival yesterday morning when shots suddenly rang out.

One man fell to the ground bleeding beavily, a wounded woman was led away and hundreds of screaming people were seen fleeing before the television station dimmed the scene.

In a separate shooting, a policeman was wounded near a hospital. Tropic FM radio reported. It was onclear if the shootings were. related.

The incidents raise new fears about security in Haiti only three weeks after new President Rene Preval was inaugurated and eight days before the United Nations' peacekeeping mandate expires.

Haitian intelligence and other sources said the shootings might involve infighting in Haiti's troubled new security force.

The force consists of officers trained at a new US-funded academy and police and army difficers who served under the former military government

Not all car models stay the same

Then purchasing a new automobile from an importer, beware of discrepancies between previous models and their nodated version.

J.G. ordered a Lantis 1996 from the Haifa branch of Delek Motors, Israel's Mazda representative. The car he bonght was on display in the showroom for his examination, and therewas a colorful brochure describing the vehicle.

What was not made clear to him was that the written material he was studying referred to the 1995 model. Though subsequent research revealed that an addendum listing minor alterations between the 1996 Lantis and its predecessor in fact does exist, and is normally inserted into the brochures, this particular agent had not received it.

According to the agent who made the sale, J.G. was given a detailed verbal explanation - both prior to purchase and once the car hadactually been given to him - along with the operation manual. The latter, it turned out, was also a 1995 publication. J.G. assumed his new car was equipped with a warning light for fuel - a feature to which he had grown accustomed in his pre-vious car, a 1976 Mercedes, and one which existed in the 1995 Lantis. Unbeknownst to him, this warning light was one of the features discontinued in the new Lantis... (Apparently, Delek Motors considers it to be such a negligible gadget that its discontinuation does not appear on the addendum, a copy of which I have since obtained. Other items, such as "illumination for cigarette lighter" and "black stripe on the underside of the back fender" do appear, bowev-

No-shows pay

When J.G. complained, his attention was called to a paragraph at the foot of the "technical specification" insert, which states: "The information in this brochure is for internacional use... the data and features appearing do not necessarily coincide with those of the models sold in Israel. Both Mazda corporation in Japan and Delek Motors Ltd. reserve the right to make changes in the technical specifications, automobile accessories or in this brochure, for whatever reason, at any time, and without advance notice.

It is thus doubtful whether J.G. would be awarded compensation for his disappointment. Nevertheless, he might have reconsidered buying this particular car had he known about its missing fuel light.

Delek Motors' Jerusalem agent responded by saying that all kinds of changes are made in Japan. "We inform the customers of these changes, though some are so minor that it wouldn't occur to us to announce them. Furthermore, some clients enter the showroom after their mind is already made up about buying a certain car. If such a client sits down and says decisively that he wants to order a car, it seems pointless to force a sales pitch on bim."

If you are considering buying a new car from Delek Motors or any other importer learn from J.G.'s experience. Be as specific as you can in your questions; find out whether the model in the showroom is identical to the one you will be receiving; ask about the date of any printed matter, and take particular care to inquire about any accessory or other feature which is importani io you. Also, he clear about which of these features is included in the price, and which is considered an "extra." If the agent is unsure about any detail of the car - however minor - request that he investigate. CLARIFICATION

Those creatures of the concrete jungle who neither live in garden suburbs nor pass through rural areas, however, become aware of spring when surveying the perfume counters at their local pharmacies or department stores.

The soft pastel hues of the packiging are important indicators that winter is now behind us. Whereas there was a preponderance of strong, bright reds and yellows in the packaging of winter fragrances and cosmetics, the spring/summer tones are light, gentle and unaggressive.

Fragrances and cosmeucs are increasingly becoming part of the corporate fashion image. Nearly all the leading fashion houses in France, Italy, Germany and the US have given their names to perfumes, and many have also branched out into cosmetics.

The only local company to go all out in this respect is Castro, which in addition to its fragrance, has a full range of skin care and make-up products.

Shoshana Ben-Zur has also made a tentative start in this direction, but has not made as forceful an impact because her PR and advertising budgets are considerably lower than those of Castro. In addition, Castro has many more retail outlets, where its cosmeucs are displayed alongside its clothing collections.

Of the international fragrance labels, some of the first to hit the Israeli market this season include Bylgari, Escada Acte 2 and Gucci Accend in respective packagings of ivory, delicate yellow and sunrise pink.

It's unfair to either recommend or denigrate a perfume, because its effect is so dependent on the ne of the first signs of body chemicals of the person spring here is the burst of wearing it. The most exotic and expensive formula could smell like a million dollars on one person and exude a totally rancid odor on another. Conversely, what might generally be described as a cheap perfume may, without effort, upgrade itself if it comes into contact with the right body chemicals.

> Thus I can refer to the abovementioned products only in respect to myself. Of the three, Bylgari - with its refined bouquet of delicately sensual aromas of Samhac jasmine tea, mimosa of grasse, bergamot and orange blossom - appeal most to my olfactory senses.

> Escada Acte 2, with its more fruity aroma, derived from a more unusual combination of peony. cinnamon and star anisced, is a little too bold for my taste, but its arrogance may be perfect for a business executive who wants to leave her impression in the air - in addition to asserting herself through her manner of speech, style of dress and body language.

> Gucci Accend is the most fragile of the trio - almost a secretive scent, which lingers pleasantly on the skin, but doesn't waft in front or behind. It's for the woman who wants to know that she smells good, but who doesn't want to make a statement via her perfume.

Of the three, Bylgari is the most expensive at NIS 374 for 100 ml of eau de parfum, NIS 238 for 50 ml and NIS 187 for 30 ml. The same volumes of Gucci Accenti eau de toilet are priced at NIS 279, NIS 185 and NIS 129. while Escada Acte 2 eau de par-fum sells for NIS 298, NIS 219 and NIS 149.

OMPUTER navigational systems for cars bave been available for several years, but they are separate screens in boxes that attach to the dashboard.

This spring, Acura will introduce the first in-dash system on its new luxury sedan, the Acura RL. It will he available only in California this year but is expected to be on-line for the East Coast in 1997.

The Acura Navigation System offers on-screen guidance to destinations on a 15-centimeter touch screen with a series of control buttons or with voice instructions.

In response to a route chosen, a computerized voice might say, Proceed to onramp of the 110 north" or "in one-half mile, exit freeway on the right."

Guinness record

The new pavigation system. developed jointly by Honda R&D Japan and Honda R&D America, uses the Global Positioning System satellites, electrogyros and state-of-the-art software to tell drivers their exact position at all times and the best route to their destina tion. The system features detailed maps of streets, highways and freeways in most metropolitan areas and can provide information and routing to hospitals. restaurants, hotels, parks, museums, automated teller machines, schools, shopping centers and other points of interest.

It will have an estimated cost of $2,000 as an option on the Acura RL.

indefensible. Such as smoking, "Not environ-mentally friendly," says Carole Jones, speaking from Guinness's suburban London office.

Such as gluttony. "Taken out in 1990," Jones continues. "Even how many pancakes can be eaten in a minute can be quite dangerous to the individual. Also, with so many people starving in the world, it's not really diplomatic." Such as life-threatening activities. "We just don't want to encourage records that are gratuitously dangerous," says Peter Matthews, consultant editor for Guinness. "Having said that, we do list the record of a Russian who fell out of an airplane without a parachute at 35,000 [feet] and lived.

"We really don't think that is something a person would do voluntarily." But climbers conquer Mount Everest voluntarily. Nobody forces astronauts to walk in space. Their records are listed.

by golly, by Guinness.

True, Matthews agrees. "Yet these are not things for the ordipary bloke to have a go at." Nor are ordinary blokes likely to challenge Monsieur Mangetout, the Frenchman with a stomach doubling as a junkyard. Since 1966 he has eaten - as part of an iron-rich diet of two pounds a day - 10 hicycles, seven TV sets, six chandeliers, a shopping cart, a computer and a low-calorie Cessna. Also one coffin, bandles and all.

Nor do we envy "Sparky" Sullivan. That's Roy Sullivan, the former Virginia park ranger struck by lightning seven omes. Sullivan committed suicide in 1983 after apparently being smitten by love and striking out. These are classics among the 15,000 oddballs, true achievers, accidental adventurers, acts of God and luck of the devil currently accepted as Guinness records. Of equal interest are those who

Then there was the man who wrote to say that he badn't spoken to his wife in 47 years," Jones recalls. Presumably, his "I do" was conversation enough.

Matthews knows there is a deadly seduction attached to his Guinness book. A boy was crushed to death in Germany last year when a mass tug-of-war went awry. A Texan died with his boots on after chug-a-lugging half a gal-Ion of bourbon.

Their intentions, Matthews says, were not presented in advance to Guioness representalives. Had they done so, the requests would have been denied.

So, he says, follow the rules:

- Read the book and go after existing records. Such as the number of gallstones (23,530) removed during a single surgery or the highest mileage (1,442,044 miles - about 2,307,000 kilometers - by a Volkswagen Beetle still puttering around Pasadena, California) by one vehicle.

- Check with Guinness two months in advance for guidelines and to make sure a published record hasn't changed. - Produce documentation, newspaper clippings, wimess statements for all stages.

Matthews isn't sure why hillions of jumpers and jugglers, the world's venom milkers and chicken pluckers, the Estonian pump-kin growers and Vermont pie bakers. Just for a Guinness mention. Possibly because the book is

Matthews does know that his work treads a million fine lines crossing myriad gray and treacherous areas. Gluttony remains an unacceptable entry, but he admits that someone "eating 2,444 baked beans one at a ome with a cocktail stick in 20 minutes is quite fun." He's pulled the plug on harehrained feats, but Guinness recently embraced bungee jumping "because it is well-known and worldwide and we need to be there." With limits.

"Somebody might take a 105year-old out of a nursing home, ne on a bungee cord and push her over a cliff." Matthews says. "I really don't think I want to encourage that."It is worth noting that the Guinness book is a bigh achiever rich with its own records. More than 77 million copies have sold, making it the world's bestselling copyrighted book.

The Buchanan phenomenon

PATRICK Buchanan is a "respectable" American antisemite in the classie mold. His spiritual ancestors are Charles Lindbergh and Henry Ford who, like him, were not only distinguished personalities in their fields but folk heroes. Buchanan is a folk hero of our time – a media star.

What makes the Buchanan phenomenon particularly sobering is that - unlike his predecessors - he knows where antisemitism can lead. This is perhaps why Buchanan, too sophisticated to deny the historicity of the Holocaust, has devoted much of his time and energy to deriding its scope and meaning. A dedicated defender of Nazi war criminals, he has called the testimonies of Holocaust survivors "group fantasies of martyrdom and heroics," and claimed that the gassings in Treblinka could not have killed anyone because "diesel fuel does not emit enough carbon monoxide to kill anybody."

His most offensive foray into raw antisemitism occurred during the weeks preceding the Gulf War. Joining American leftists who found nothing objectionable in Saddam Hussein's occupation of Kuwait, Buchanan insisted the US had no business fighting the Iraqi dictator. But unlike most other critics of American intervention, he blamed "the Jews" for leading the US into what he deemed an unnecessary and costly war. "There are only two groups beating the drums for war in the Middle East: the Israeli defense ministry and its amen corner in the US," he said.

Worse, he selectively listed only oames like Kissinger, Rosenthal, Perle and Krauthammer as those who were "goading" America into war, while those who would die oo the battlefield as a result of their machinations would be "kids with names like McAllister, Murphy, Gonzales and Leroy Brown.'

It was a charge patterned after the Nazi libels before World War II, which portrayed the Jews as political manipulators who let Gentiles die for them. And, like Nazi propagandists, Buchanan was fazed neither by the lie's magnitude oor its absurdity.

Considering the reputation he has established, it is hardly surprising Buchanan attracts bigots of all stripes: white supremacists, misogyuists, homophobes, xenophobes and antisemites. Two members of his campaign staff have had to suspend themselves when found to be associated with extremist groups. And, as The Jerusalem Post revealed oo Suoday, his campaign's official Internet site boasts articles which charge Hillary Clintoo with being a Mossad agent and blame the Mossad for the death of President Bill Clinton's aide Vince Foster. Yet Buchanan is decidedly different from the redneck bigots and flakes who made presidential bids in the past. He is a sophisticated Washington insider, a former speech writer for presidents Richard Nixon and Rooald Reagan, and a man who does not lie when he says that some of his best friends are Jews. Most significantly, unlike the provincial rabble-rousers who pepper the US, he is a household name. This is due mainly to the clever exploitation of his position as television and radio commentator. As New York Times columnist A.M. Rosenthal pointed out last Friday, even though he has been a declared presidential candidate for six years, "CNN allowed him to appear as a daily regular on Crossfire and The Capital Gang." Another show, The McLaughlin Group, gave him a weekly appearance, and "everywhere he appeared - regular or guest - TV masqueraded him as a journalist. They knew better. He was not a journalist but a candidate for the presidency...The creation of Mr. Buchanan as a national figure was committed by news people."

It would be unrealistic to attach too much importance to his win in the New Hampshire primary yesterday. He garnered the support of a little more than a quarter of the electorate, and his coming in first was made possible only by the splitting of the moderate vote. The combined vote of front-runner Robert Dole and former Tennessee governor Lamar Alexander, both moderates, was more than 50 percent. Nor is there any chance that Buchanan will capture the Republican nomination.

Yet it would be wrong to dismiss the Bochanan phenomenoo as an expression of frustration and protest. As a representative of the increasingly acceptable fascist trend in the world, be probably represents a solid 15 percent of the American population - a demographic slice similar to that which oco-fascist parties in France, Russia and Italy represent. For now, they are still a fringe movement. But if Buchanan gains momentum in the primaries, the Republican cominating convention will not be able to ignore his followers' platform demands. Nor can anyooc guess how a rising crime rate, drug proliferatioo, massive illegal immigration, unemployment, or a socio-economic crisis caused by revolutionary technology will affect his fortunes four years from oow.

Above all, the rise of oeo-fascist movements tec that huner-antimistic proces about "the end of history" and the disappearance of war as an instrument of policy may be dangerously premature. Dreaming about a New Middle East may be a pleasant preoccupation. But for now, it seems that the old monsters of bigotry, xenophobia and demagogy are still very much alive, even in the greatest democracy Jewish officials are aware of this effort to begin converting Jaffa into a predominantly Arab area. But, as supporters of the Oslo accords, they believe it is welcome, as it demonstrates that peaceful coexistence" can exist in a new-style Middle East.

In 1948, Jaffa Arabs began firing into Tel Aviv even before the Arab armies invaded Israel. Jews were killed in the Carmel Market and surrounding areas. From the Hassan Bek mosque snipers picked off Tel Aviv citizens at their leisure.

Urged to leave their homes in April 1948 by their own leaders, nearly all did so. They were told: "When the Jews are wiped out you can live in the choicest Tel Aviv homes.

Even before the war was over, "liberal" Israelis urged Ben-Gurion to allow the Jaffa Arabs to return to their bomes. "No!" said Ben Gurinn. "They started the war. They will pay for it."

Like the French Bourbons, there are those who never learn, and never forget.

When the Old City of Jerusalem was recaptured in 1967, mayor Teddy Kollek encouraged Arabs occupying the Jewish Quarter to return, despite captured Jordanian Legion documents detailing orders to liquidate the Jews. They returned in their tens of thousands, laying the foundation of many of the capital's present-day problems.

Another man as hlinkered as the Bourbons was Tel Aviv mayor Shlomo Lahat. He encouraged the restoration of that sniper's paradise, the Hassan Bek mosque, close to the Dan Panorama hotel. Naturally, Jaffa isn't the only Arab takeover target. A PLO-controlled Palestinian information institute working quite openly in Jerusalem is encouraging not only local Arabs but also others worldwide to register their claims to property their families might have

For months past, Jerusalemites have noticed Arabs driving around lewish areas, taking copious notes and drawing plans of huildings, houses and apartment blocks. One Arab, challenged by a citizen who feared he might be a burglar on the prowl, drove off without explanation.

Understandably, a vexed Shimon Peres nearly jumped out of his skin to shout:
"Provocation!" when Binyamin
Netanyahu and Mayor Ehnd Olmert asserted that he is secretly negotiating to divide Jerusalem again. Yet his "peace partners" quite openly contradict him. Three weeks ago Abu Zayad, a

Earlier this month Hanan Ashrawi said on international TV: "It's inconceivable that only one sovereign power controls Jerusalem. Jerusalem is and must be the capital of the future Palestinian state."

This week a senior member of the Palestinian Council said in the Palestinian paper Al-Quds: "It's not only impossible to eradicate the PLO Covenant, but our future government will have its seat in Jerusalem. We have transformed our battle from one of shooting to one of words. The same battle goes on until we establish our Palestinian state."

This comment was allowed by the Israeli censor. Nobody in the government denied it.

ONE can understand Peres's sensitivity. Negotiations have been taking place with Arafat's men via Yossi Beilin. To distance the premier from public gaze, Beilin has been using academics Yair Hirschfeld and his sidekick and disciple Ron Pundik.

According to Palestinian sources, the two men have discussed the problem of Jerusalem quite openly under the cover of "academic questions" at Orient House and at many other venues abroad.

What makes a mockery of Peres's denials is that Beilin's legmen are simply repeating a highly successful modus operandi: the way they secretly negotiated with the PLO in the latter half of 1992 and m early 1993. This was to create the framework of the Oslo

Both men and their mastermind Beilin, who was following Peres's instructions, boasted quite openly of their key role in doing a deal with Arafat.

What the selective memory of the legal authorities "forgot" was that what the Beilin-Hirschfeld-Pundik team was engaged in at the time was totally illegal, as laid down by the Knesset.

As astonishing are files in the Prime Minister's Office which show that Yitzhak Rabin never gave permission for such meetings. They took place without his knowledge. To add insult to injury, such negotiations were totally against Rabin's policies at

As the writers of this column disclose in their forthcoming book The Tragedy of Yitzhak Rabin, the prime minister was furious when documents given him by his intelligence chiefs spelled out in precise detail where and when in Europe the Beilin- controlled Hirschfeld-Pundik team was meeting with the PLO.

This was happening at a time when Rabin's own negotiators under Elyakim Rubinstein were holding talks in Washington with a PLO team. Certain Israeli officials, aware of the efforts of Beilin's groupies, urged the Arabs to "put more pressure on the Israelis. You're safe in toing so. They will give you all you want in the end, so you can be tough," Intelligence men were surprised that Rabin didn't react to the news of what was going on behind his back. There was no showdown with Peres.

Rabin beld his fire, convinced that the Foreign Ministry would fail. He would then be in a position to condemn Peres for his illegal actions.

ike Americans, Israelis want to "have it all." Like American politicians, Shimon Peres and Bibi Netarryahu are telling the voters that it's no problem.

Peres will give us peace, and we won't have to give up the timest part of Jerusalem.

Netanyahu will do better - he'll give us peace, and not only will we keep all of Jerusalem, we'll keep all 144 settlements, and the Palestinians will get no more land and no state.

If any of them resort to terror, the IDF will wipe them out, come home, and that will be the end of it. Who would have thought the Israeli-Palestinian conflict could be solved so painlessly?
Whoever wins, Peres or Netanyahu, we can't lose.

As they say, this election is going to be the most fateful in Israel's history.
Yet in their campaigns, both Peres and Netanyahu are either lying to us, or they believe their own pipe dreams. On election day, Israel is going to determine its destiny with the Palestinians. You would hardly know from the candidates that the Palestinians have a few ideas of their own about what that destiny should be.

There isn't a single Palestinian of any political consequence. who's ready to make peace with Israel unless his people get a state with a capital in East Jerusalem. This is a "red-line" issue for Either Peres and Netanyahu are both lying to us or they believe their own pipe dreams them, meaning they would rather fight forever than concede on it. I hope they will be flexible on the boundaries of the state and capital - otherwise we'll never reach agreement - but the basic principle for them is non-nego; tiable.

And it doesn't matter if we Israelis just stand firm - the Palestinians are serious. They are nationalists with very strong feelings about Jerusalem. They didn't make this all up just to spite us.

But Peres and his ministers keep swearing that Jerusalem is our eternally indivisible capital, ours alone, while assuring us that peace is "inevitable," "ineversible." For Netanyahu, the problem is that we've been too conciliatory; the trick is to give the Palestinians less. Let them have their cities. but let them know that wherever they look up, they will see shining Jewish settlements on the hills expanding freely. And let them know that the ulti mate power in the land will always be Israelis with guns. Then, despair, they'll make peace.

THIS IS imbecilic. But this is national debate over our futilities It's such a relief, isn't it?

Both sides will go forward with the peace process, the only ques-tion is which one will get us the better deal. There doesn't seem to be much difference between them anymore.

But there is, because this peace process has a long way to go. Giving up Gaza and Jenin was the easy part. All the "painful concessions" are still ahead of us. We don't have to make them.

We can keep every settlement and every inch of Jerusalem; we just can't have peace too. We have to choose. In that choice lies the difference between Peres and Netanyahu. Peres believes in this peace process. When the time comes, I think he will decide it is worth more than eternal Israeli sovereignty over Shuafat refugee camp, and over the other East Jerusalem neighborhoods where 170,000 Arabs live and handly any Jew cares to visit. Netanyahu won't get that far. For him, this peace process is a catastrophe. At the first opports nity, be will let it collaps

He'll say nothing but no to Arafat, and from then on send the IDF to do his talking. As Netanyahu's more candid after ego, MK Tsahi Haneghi, put a last year, We're talking about the use of brutal force to subdue a people. This is the hard choice we face.

Less Israel, less Jernsalem and a real chance for peace, or all of Israel and a guarantee of no

But Peres and Netanyahn won't tell us this because we don't want to hear about hard choices; we want to have it all. After the election, I'm afraid the Palestinians will remind us that it's one or the other.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ONE PEOPLE

Sir, - The article hy Larry Derfner ("Hutzpa!" - January 28) commenting on A.B. Yehoshua's ranting presentation at the World Jewish Congress Global Assembly was sad - yes, both the article and Yehoshua's anger.

It is obvious that not every Jew in the world can or wants to live in Israel. But most Jews do feel a family connection to their brothers and sisters in the Land. And like in any family situation, when anyone is in need, the members who can will extend a helping hand. When the need no longer exists; the receiver will let the giver know with a thank you, and that's that.

So, Mr. Derfner, suppose you eliminate this "them and us" thinking and start considering Jews throughout the world as an entity. Both Derfner and Yehoshua might feel much better if their anger and bitterness were channeled elsewhere and they would realize we are all one people, no matter where we

JEWS FROM ARAB LANDS

Sir, - Having founded and chaired the Jews of Arab Lands Committee of the British Zionist Federation 20 years ago, I support the case for proper attention to be paid to the position and claims of these Jewish communities as presented in Malka H. Shulewitz's article of January 26, "Potent political

It is not only that these Jews were compelled to leave the countries where they had been settled many centuries before the Arab invasion, but since 1949, when the majority left for Israel and a large number to the West, the property of these communities, individual, communal and religious, was confiscated by various Arab governments. The Jews have legitimate claims for restitution or compensation to be presented in the current peace process when the issue of refugees is discussed.

PERCY GOURGEY Jerusalem (Twickenham, Middx.).

ARZA'S SUPPORT FOR PEACE

Sir, - Rabbi David Forman implies that the principle of religious pluralism is the Reform movement's sole preoccupation ("The impression of 'peace passivity,' "February 9). I led the Arza group of 55 rabbis which met with Haim Ramon. Prior to our arrival in Israel, we met with with Hosni Mubarak, Amr Mussa and Osama el-Baz in Cairo. In Israel, we also met with Shimon Peres and Binyamin Netanyahu. In all cases, we emphasized that the primary purpose of our visit was to give strong and public support for the peace process. Our visit to Gaza the day before the Palestinian elections was intended to convey our backing of the Oslo accords. In Israel too, I publicly stated to Peres, Netanyahu and Ramon that the Reform movement would continue to support the peace process, irrespective of any approach these leaders would take on issues of religion and state. This is hardly the liberal "religious blackmail," which Rabbi Forman implies. How would Rabbi Forman have wanted us to respond to Haim Ramon? After he gratuitously and with breathtaking historical revisionism accused the Reform movement of responsibility for the war in Lebanon - should we have waved off the interior minister's wild imagination as the necessary price for peace? How should we respond to widespread reports that Prime Minister Peres is prepared to make major anti-democratic concessions to Orthodox parties in exchange for their political support? Should we shrug it off as the necessary price for peace? Is democracy inconsistent with peace? The past three years have demonstrated that it is possible to engage m peace-making without surrendering to ultra-Orthodox political blackmail. We should avoid characterizing those who are unwilling to pay the price of haredi demands, as, by definition, doing damage to the peace process.

Let us not confuse the arsonist with the fireman. RABBI AMMIEL HIRSCH, Executive Director, Arza

THE SUNDAY SUPPLEMENT

Sir, - Several of your readers have complained that the Sunday supplement American Outlook is not useful to people here because it is too specifically American.

They are wrong. The Sunday supplement is essential to people living here. The US is the most powerful nation in the world and Israel's most vital friend. It is also a complex and continuously evolving entity. Whether the US is viewed as a valued ally or with invidious disdain, it is to our advantage to understand the American political, economic and social arrangements and their concomitant problems. A mature working relationships between allies requires realistic expectations and an understanding of inherent limitations. The Sunday supplement helps provide this. I would be willing to forgo the comics (perhaps except Peanuts and Doonsbury) in order to have more space for additional substantive material. MURIEL MOULTON

Bicycles must have a fixed white light in front and a red one in the back, and also various kinds of reflectors. Every child in fourth grade receives instructions to this effect. This law has existed for a long time and it is a pity that your reader has never seen anything about it. Of course, it is up to the police to enforce the law according to its priorities, but the involvement of parents, friends and family is also

ANEW VANTAGE POINT

Experiencing the Grand Canyon's West Rim

By Susan Bayer Ward

rizona-After I returned from an exciting adventure at the Grand Canyon's West Rim. a friend asked. "The West Rim?"

The much developed South Rim, and the popular but less developed North Rim, have attracted growing hordes of tourists since the turn of the century when the railroad connected the outside world to the South Rim, But the West Rim?

"I didn't know you could visit the West Rim," he cootinued. Rather than take offense, I informed my friend that until recently there was no way to tour the far west reaches of this great natural wonder.

however, is worth it. It's an adventure in itself. The Hualapai have many plans for the future including already running one- and two-day river rafting trips from a put in point below the rim to Pearce Ferry located on Lake Mead.

The tribe's accessibility to the Colorado River is a unique feature about their "patch" of the Grand Canyon. In fact, many river-running outfitters who start their trips 230 miles east at Lees Ferry take advantage of the Diamond Creek Road access and use it as their west-end take-out point.

Other features include a small casino, a legendary "bat gold" tower, catered rim-side barbecue lunches and an airstrip much used by tour operators out of Las Vegas (120 miles west) who fly in tourists for day trips.

I first got an idea of where the majority of these fly-in groups hailed from when I entered the simple air terminal-cum-casino building. All of the signage was in English and Chinese!

I asked my Hualapai guide, Honga, about this.

"We often handle 400 people a day here, and many of them are from Taiwan, In fact," he scratched his bead in some wonder, "we all thought Taiwan was a little island. But they just keep coming and coming."

Evidently, Taiwanese adore the American West and after settling into luxury accommodations in razzle-dazzle Las Vegas, they yearn for open spaces. They flock to the nearby West Rim to tour, enjoy a lunch served up at the second viewpoint, and do a little gambling before they fly, or bus, back to Las Vegas.

It is the savvy Hualapai who are slowly and carefully developing the Grand Canyon's West Rim for tourism.

Today, good roads, as well as a resuscitated railway, and a small airport make this end of the Grand Canyon easily accessible. (Four million people a year crowd in for a visit.) There is also a plenitude of places to stay and dine. The canyon's west end sprawls amidst wild, rugged terrain in northwest Arizona, 80 miles north of Kingman. Some nice viewpoints are located along this rim's southern expanse which forms the northern border of the 997,000-acre. U-shaped Hualapai (pronounced "wall-ah-pie")

JERUSALEM Mayor and Likud MK Ehud Olmert yesterday accused the police of being inactive in eastern Jerusalem, adding the resulting vacuum had been filled by "divisions of scores of Fatah stormtroopers wandering around [eastern] Jerusalem and the [Old City] markets, with identity tags clearly showing to whom they beling. This is the nucleus of a Palestinian Police unit they're preparing in Jerusalem."

Speaking to reporters at the Knesset, Olmert also repeated his claim that Jibril Rajoub's Palestinian preventive security force is also opeoly operating in the capital.

"Nnbody is saying the govern-ment intends to divide Jerusalem but it must be judged by what's LIAT COLLINS happening on the ground." Olmert said. "This is a leadership which has lost its ability m say 'nn.' Olmert said in meetings he had as mayor with Internal Security

Minister Moshe Shahal, the minister had been told the Palestinian Authority is deepening its penetration in eastern Jerusalem, but Shahal had said he could not act without evidence that would stand up in court: He also said Shahal had promised to close Orient House several times in the past. Olmert also repeated his stand. that independent advisers had said such n closure would not affect the peace process. He said the government could not avoid discussing Jerusalem's status, as it is required to do so by a clause in the Olso Accords, "but they might ask to put the discussions off until after the elections."

Police sources strongly denied Olmert's allegations Palestinian police or quasi-police units were operating in the Old City. The mayor may have mis-taken Wakf guards and scouts beloing with crowd control during Ramadan for Palestinian policemen, the sources said. Palestinian newspapers have reported in recent days that Fatah activists also organized civil guard units in the Old City to help with crowd control during Ramadan, but there activity has been barely coticeable, the sources said.

Ben-Eliezer said construction in Betar is continuing, a claim made earlier in the day by Betar Local Council head Moshe Leibowitz. A few hours before speaking on the religious news program, Ben-Eliezer met with editors from the haredi newspapers and gave details of plans to build nearly 40,000 housing units for haredim over the next decade. "The council decided not to accept Degel's request for parity, but will set up a committee made up of two rabbis from Aguda, and two rahhis from Degel Hatorah, which will deal with the matter and then bring it to the rabhis."

Shtockhammer said that the council did not deal with the question of who will be on the party's Knesset list, and has until April 30 to dn so. If the past is any indicatinn, the party will wait until nearly the last minute before making a decision.

Those who were hoping for some indication as in who the council will support in the race for prime minister were disappointed, and Shtockhammer said the issue did not come up, although it will undoubtedly be decided just prior to the elections. The rabbis' directives will influence the votes of tens of thousands of their followers, and their decisions are considered critical for either candidate.

Shtockhammer said that the council came out against haredim joining the Labor Party. "We need to be members of God-fearing parties," Shtockhammer said. "It is also not reasonable to register for a party that you will not

German FM delays visit until after elections

DAVID MAKOVSKY and news agencies

GERMAN Fnreign Minister Klaus Kinkel has decided to postpone his visit to Israel planned for March 3rd until after the elections here, Foreign Ministry nfficials

said last night. We received word this afternoon from Bonn that Kinkel is not coming because of the elections here," one official said last night.

Germany apparently wanted to avoid being put in the position whereby Kinkel could not visit the Orient House due to the new order issued by Internal Security Minister Moshe Shahal. The European Uninn has a policy whereby all foreign ministers who visit Israel must pay a so-called "courtesy call" at Orient House. German officials also do nnt want to stage a confrontation with the Peres government on this issue, fearing it will only play into the hands of the Likud.

The US, meanwhile, tried yesterday to avoid getting dragged into the dispute nver whether Israel should prevent fareign ministers from visiting Orient House.

This is a question that, really, the Israelis and Palestinians have to work out. They now have direct lines of communication with each State Department other." spokesman Nicholas Burns told reporters.

"I think the time has come, probably, not to expect nthers in wurk out all of these problems, hut to have them work their problems out directly," he said.

American Jewish support for peace process up since Rabin assassination

MARILYN HENRY NEW YORK

IN the aftermath of the assassinaunn nf prime minister Yitzhak Rabin, support for the Israeli-Arab peace process has increased significantly among American Jews, the American Jewish Committee announced yesterday.

In a survey conducted last month, 75 percent of American Jews said they support the handling of the peace negotiations with the Palestinians, as compared with 64% in September 1995. In addition, 70% said they supported the handling of the talks with Syria, against 61% last September.

A large majority said they had a favorable impression of Prime Minister Shimnn Peres, while their impressions of opposition leader Binyamin Netanyahn were evenly divided, the survey showed.

However, as was the case with previnus surveys, American Jewish views of Israeli leaders had to be qualified by the fact that 53% were unaware that Peres and Netanyahu are in different parties. The survey was the fourth in a series nn American Jewish npininn about Israel and the peace which process, began September 1993, immediately after the signing of the Israel-PLO accord. A demographically representative national sample of 1,013 self-identified Jewish respondents was interviewed by telephone January 10-16. While a majority of American Orthodox Jews continue to oppose the peace process, the level of apposition among the Orthodox has declined. In January, 56% of the Orthodox said they opposed the govern-ment's current handling of the beace negotiations with the Arabs, compared with 64% in September 1995. Among other findings:- A large majority continue to believe that the PLO is not doing enough to control Palestinian extremist elements, like Hamas .- A majority opposes amending the Law of Return to han Jewish political extremists from the country.- A large majority believes that Reform and Conservative conversions conducted in Israel should be recognized on a par with Orthodox conversions.

Cold Facts Amid Yellowstone's Grandeur

by Nancy Shute

stepped out of my tent one midnight in the middle of Yellowstone National Park, bracing myself for Lithe sharp slap of a cold February night. I pulled off my cap and let the tiny crystals kiss my cheeks and eyelids as they melted.

My fellow travelers were asleep in their warm tents; the park was mine. I strained to hear the Upper Falls a mile away, but the air was silent save for the almost imperceptible murmur of falling snow, sifting another foot onto Yellowstone's 20-foot-deep winter

This was Yellowstone as I'd never experienced it before: no crowds, no commotion, no recreational vehicles queuing up to see the grizzly bears as if at a drive-in zoo. Instead, I had thousands of acres of geysers and bison and elk and stately spruce and fir, laid out for me on a snowy tableau that turned the timiest furnarole, or most furtive transit of a pine marten into

"In winter," Steven Fuller, photographer and winterkeeper at Yellowstone, related, "the animals aredriven into a few concentrations, mostly along the thermal areas and catch basins. One of the pleasures for visitors is the chance to see large concentrations of animals up close and accessible. And the geothermals really come into their own."

course offered by the Yellowstone Institute (a nonprofit foundation) to see for ourselves.

Arden Bailey, owner of Yellowstone Expeditions, had met us at Mammoth Hot Springs with his "snow coach," a van mounted on tracks. This was far better than using snow machines, cousins to the snowmobiles that have become so prevalent that on some weekends more than 1,000 of them converge on Old Faithful, generating noise and pollution worse than even summer's onslaught of humanity.

During the two-hour snow coach ride south from Mammoth to Canyon, Arden and Don Nelson, director of the Yellowstone Institute and our snow ecology any one of those factors a tiny bit, and life becomes precarious

Winter gives Yellowstone's animals three choices: Move, adapt or die. The motion was easy to see. Trumpeter swans and white pelicans had fled, and bull elk huddled on bare spots melted by geothermal activity. The dying was easy to see, too. At Swan Lake Flats, we spotted three coyotes and a halfdozen ravens converging on the carcass of an elk whose stores of fat, laid on in summer, ran out before winter did.

Adaptation to winter is a subtler manner. Lightweight animals such as lynx and snowshoe hare glide across the snow on their wide, padded feet, but no human can walk in deep snow without quickly becoming exhausted.

Yellowstone's grizzły bears adapt to winter by hibernating unoil March. But many other animals thrive, or at least survive, through temperatures that drop to 40 below. In the lodgepole pine forest near camp, Don showed us the yard-wide track where a bison had bulldozed its way along, using its immense head to reach the grass below,

"Whoa!" he shouted. The bison stood less than 10 feet away, kept from running by chest-deep snow. It glared under its snow-capped forelock while we hurried away, hoping it wouldn't expend any precious show: the bison so close, the geysers' luxuriant steam. But the snow itself offers an extraordinary performance. creating a minute three-dimensional saga that experts decipher for clues to weather patterns, animal behavior, even the risk of avalanches.

Beneath the surface, the snow contains the history of the entire winter. On our first full day at camp, we set off into the woods armed with avalanche

"Dig," Don said, and we did, taking turns carving into the snow until we hit bare ground, 48 inches down. Following his instructions, we swept the sides of the pit with wallpaper brusbes, revealing the layers of every snowfall, winter's torte. Scraping at lower layers with popsicle sticks, we found dense granules far different from the top's fluffy stellar crystals. Over time the crystals dry and agglomerate, forming a loose layer that, when overlaid with heavier new snow, triggers deadly avalanches. Avalanche experts often dig snow pits. brushing the sides and checking crystals just as we did, to look for dangerously unstable layers.

This place is teeming with life right now, underneath the snowpack," Don said, pointing at the seemingly lifeless ground. Small animals such as voles. mouse-sized rodents, spend the whole winter under the snow, eating dried plants and insulated by the snow from predators and frigid air, Insects carry on, too, and some plants even photosynthesize under the thick blanket.

In the morning, before setting out, we had piled up a huge mound of loose snow near camp. During the day, the snow should have consolidated, and now we would turn the mound into a quinzhee, a snow shelter of the type built by Athabascan Indians in Alaska's

In an hour, it was done: a domed house 15 feet across and tall enough for the tallest man to stand up in. Thanks to snow's insulating properties, the temperature inside would remain at least 32 degrees, even if there were a howling storm outside.

On Sunday morning we left camp. The forest was quiet, but with Don, Arden and his partner Erica Hutchings as guides, we soon realized it was a very busy place. We could read the tracks of a pine marten, two mouse-sized paws hitting the snow together. Then a moose, walking apparently unbothered by six feet of snow. Then a coyote, its feet cutting a foot into the Back at camp, it was time to pack for Monday's trip back to Mammoth. We needed to demolish the quinzhee shelter, lest it prove a hazard for others. Jesse and Ken climbed on top. Nothing happened. They jumped. Still nothing, It took 10 of us, jumping together, to crack the dome of tiny crystals.

Mammoth offered showers, telephones and chardonnay, but we deferred those pleasures for one last fling with nature. Just off the road we followed a well-worn path to the Boiling River, where a stream of steaming-hot water pours into the Yellowstone River, it's the only place in the park where swimming in thermal water is permitted, and I'd been there in summer. But it was magic to strip off our sweaters and wool pants to step into nature's hot tub, basking in the contradictions of a Yellowstone winter.

Good Photos in the Badlands

By Carl and Ann Purcell

The best shootout in the West between cowboys and Indians can be done with your trusty

One crisp morning, we loaded into four-wheeldrive Jeeps and bounced over the rolling terrain in . search of the mounted cowboys who were watching the buffalo berd during the annual roundup at Custer State Park in South Dakota.

Taking pictures from a moving jeep is not easy and, in fact, the best pictures of this roundup are taken from the public viewing area about a quarter-mile from the corrals. The drivers run the herd very close to this area, allowing spectators and photographers an excellent view.

After the buffaloes are in the holding corrals, you can get close-up shots. Try to crop out the fences so that your picture doesn't look like a zoo photo.

You also can explore the Badlands from the saddle. On horseback, it is a good idea to restrict yourself to one camera. We had anticipated having to carry all extra equipment in our photographers' vests, but we also could store extra film and lenses in our horses" saddlebags. Our cowboy guides signed model releases, and we were able to set up all the cliché cowboy shots we wanted on the high grassy table and with magnificent buttes.

The Badlands' colorful sunsets provide a vivid backdrop against which to silhouette the figure of a cowboy.

Keep your pictures simple. The best photographs of cowboys are taken with a clean background or against the sky. The easiest shot is when the rider is on a bluff above you. If you are not down far enough, you'll want to check that the legs of the horse are not "cut off" by the angle of your shot. Lying down on the ground to take your photo might not appeal to some city slickers, but the dirt on your leather chaps will not hurt them and the resulting picture will be worth it.

You may want to carry a polarizing filter, as the light in the Badlands is very "white." Be careful, when you are using a polarizing filter not to let the. sky go too dark. We underexposed all our photos by half a stop instead of using a filter. (We shot our ISO 100 film at ISO 125. If your camera reads the film speed automatically and you cannot set your ISO manually, you can set the plus-minus compensation meter for minus one-half.)

For example, if John Muir hadn't been as much a writer as a naturalist and champion of preservation. his ideas probably would have died with him, and his beloved Yosemite Valley might not be a national park, as it became in 1890.

Pioneer conservationist Aldo Leopold's notions about keeping pristine areas forever free of roads and other man-made "improvements" seemed bizarre when be first put them forward. If he hadn't expressed himself so eloquently, New Mexico's 750,000-acre Gila National Wilderness, the nation's first, might not have been set aside in 1924.

And in 1960, author Wallace Stegner gave the movement for systematic nationwide protection of roadless wilds an enormous, some say critical, push by penning his "Wilderness Letter" and sending it to

"Something will have gone out of us as a people if we ever let the remaining wilderness be destroyed," Stegner wrote.

Four years later, the National Wilderness Act became law. It now protects about 100 million acres of federally owned land.

Stegner's words open "Testimony." a plea to preserve 5.7 million acres of Utah public lands under America's Redrock Wilderness Act, which is now pending in U.S. Congress. A competing bill proposes to open more than two-thirds of the same lands to "Testimony" echoes Stegner's wilderness letter, with short essays, notes and poems by 20 of the U.S.'s most distinguished writers with connections to Utah, including former U.S. Poet Laureate Mark Strand, Pulitzer Prize winner N. Scott Momaday, John McPhee, Barry Lopez and Rick Bass.

What seems so compelling in today's often windy environmental word battles is the writers' refusal to do anything but say what they feel.

Writer Terry Tempest Williams and writer and photographer Stephen Trimble, both Utahans, edited and compiled the book. Williams said that she and Trimble began by sending fellow writers a letter that opened, "We need your help ..." "The miraculous thing is that these writers delivered within two weeks," Trimble says. He and Williams assembled the book and had it ready for printing in a month.

The creators of "Testimony" hark back to earlier advocacy writing. But it all feels fresh, as if 20 voices had struck an undiscovered and irresistibly powerful

What seems so compelling in today's often windy environmental word battles is the writers' refusal to do anything but say what they feel; to say why each cares what happens to the high canyons and desert

"We wanted to tell stories that bypass rhetoric and pierce the heart," Williams says. "These lands are sacred. In this country, we're so afraid to talk about things that way."

Instead of broad landscapes, the book gives as spiritual, devotional

"My place of refuge is a wilderness canyon in southern Utah," Trimble writes. "It bestows peace of mind."

This canyon lies in one of the proposed wilderness areas, but Trimble doesn't tell us where it is. The point is his personal connection to it. Bill Kittredge, a Montana writer.

university English teacher and recipient of a humanities award from President Clinton, saw his invitation to write for "Testimony" as a call to arms. "There's been a lot of complacency among writers and everybody," be says. His contribution to the book was a far gentler sketch of animals playing in twilight along the Big Blackfoot River. "We are nothing if not mystified amid glories," he writes.

These written miniatures open windows on spectacular expanses, proposed wildernesses next to or close to southern Utah's superstar national parks: Canyonlands, Bryce, Zion, Arches and Capital Reef.

Whether "Testimony" helps move Congress to pass the Redrock Wilderness Act remains to be seen, But it will, inevitably, move thousands of readers and become part of the canon of the best American writing about landscape, outer and inner.

Preserving the remnants of Egypt's synagogues

Cairo is trying to prevent Jews from selling off their ancient houses of prayer, Abraham Rabinovich reports

N audience made up mainly of expatriate Egypoan Jews applauded at a Tel Aviv University symposium this month when speakers called on the Egyptian authorioes to save the rich Jewish heritage of Egypt from Jews.

"In the existing circumstances," said Dr. Yoram Meital, who teaches modern Egyptian history at Ben-Gurion University, "there is no alternative but to ask the Egyptian authorities to take the synagogues under their care."

The circumstances be was referring to was the danger that the present leadership of the quickly dwindling Jewish community will sell off abandoned synagogues as real estate. In addition, rare prayer books and Jewish artifacts - antiquities under Egyptian law - have been illegally sold to Judaica col-lectors abroad. Reportedly the buyers include haredim and other religious Jews,

The one synagogue remaining in Port Said was sold last year to an Egyptian property developer who is building a shopping center on the site. Carmen Weinstein, a dissident member of Cairo's Jewish community leadership, told the symposium that the sale had been made by the president of the Cairo community, Emil Russo, for 450,000 Egyptian pounds ($132,000).

She charged that he had kept 50,000 pounds for himself as a commission. Russo could not be reached for comment. The bulk of the money from the sale is intended for the upkeep of old-age facilities and other institutions maintained by the community for its few surviving members, all elderly.

Weinstein said that Russo had also discussed the possibility of renting out two of Cairo's remaining 10 synagogues, presently empty.

If you rent something in Cairo you can never get people out afterwards," she warned.

The subsequent nationalization of private businesses as well as the Six Day War caused most of those remaining in Egypt to depart, leav-ing behind tiny communities in Cairo and Alexandria.

All of the symposium's partici-pants, including Prof. Shimon Shamir, former ambassador to Cairo and present ambassador to Amman, praised the Egyptian authorities for the protection they longer in use.

Weinstein said that five of the 10 synagogues in Cairo have already been declared anoquities by the Egypuan authorines by virtue of their being more than 100 years old or having some special historic feature. She called on organizations of Egyptian Jews now living abroad 10 petioon the Egyptian authorities to take similar action regarding the remaining synagogues so as to

If they are declared antiquities, the synagogues cannot be sold. scrolls, prayerbooks, and religious artifacts would be catalogued and placed under government protecoon, making it difficult for them to simply disappear into the antiquines market. "It is my belief that synagogues should not be destroyed." Weinstein said. "They are an emblem of the community that has been there. To those who say 'Why keep the synagogues when there are no more Jews?" I say. 'Why keep the pyramids when there are no more pharaohs?"

When synagogues are declared Egypnian antiquioes, she noted, it does not mean that the Jewish community is deprived of a say about them. One such synagogue, the Ben-Ezra, where the famous Cairo geniza was found a century ago. recently underwent far-reaching renovations under the auspices of the Egypoan Antiquioes Authority in a project initiated and financed hy Edgar Bronfman, head of the World Jewish Congress.

NOT EVERYONE agrees that all the old synagogues need be preserved.

"I think money received from the sale of unused synagogues should be invested in a Jewish museum that would reflect the legacy of this illustrious community," former Israeli ambassador to Egypt Moshe Sasson said to a recent interview.

Sasson noted that there were 32 synagogues when he took up his post in Cairo in 1981, but only 12 wheo he left six years later. In the absence of any rabbinical authority in Egypt, the then head of the Jewish community said he had received permission from the chief rabbis of Israel and France to sell off the synagogues, with the conditioo that the money be used to shore up remaining communal Sasson suggested that a museum be created in the courtyard of the Adli Synagogue in the center of Cairo, which was lavishly restored after the Camp David agreements hy philanthropist Nissim Gaon. A former amhassador to Rome as well, Sasson noted that a gem of a Jewish museum is attached to the main synagogue of that city. An even larger one should be built in Cairo, he said.

"If I were head of the communiry," said the former ambassador, "I would appoint an internacional Jewish advisory board, including at least one Israeli, to guide me."

Weinstein, who is in charge of restoration work at the Jewish cemetery in Cairo, said that the Egyptian authorioes had proven cooperative when a new mad threatened to destroy 300 graves. Reacting to protests from Jews in Egypt and abroad, the government built a bridge over the endangered part of the cemetery instead.

With money donated by Sephardi philanthropists abroad. Weinstein said she has had a wall built around most of the cemetery. She is currently trying to raise fu pensate squatters who would be moved from their present locations in and around the cemetery.

Meital, who has recently published a book, Jewish Sites and Life in Egypt, said that preservation of synagogues had tourism value that could not be dismissed. Beyond that, he said, the Egyptian authori-oes dealt respectfully with all holy places, relating to Jewish sites as part of the Egyptian national her-

Voodoo comes out of the dark in its African birthplace

BETH DUFF-BROWN

OZENS of monkey and crocodile skulls dangle above the altar. As the crouching priest calls on his gods, a shaft of sunlight streams into the mud hut and the bony jaws seem to come to life.

Pray for the good health of our families, chants Sossa Guedehoungue, the 26-year-old high priest of voodoo in Benin, where the 350-year-old religion "Pray for the safe journey of our voodoo is coming out of the dark. On January 10, Benin's government inaugurated National Voodoo Day, giving the religion practiced by 65 bercent of the 5.4 million Beninese an official place alongside Christianity and Islam.

Sossa, who was elected by priests five years ago to head the national bureau that oversees the practice of voodgo, arrives in his hometown of Doutou in a shiny Nissan, his farnily flag streaming from the hood as his chauffeur races the vehicle his two dozen wives and more than 100 children and 300 grandchildren. "If it were an evil thing, we wouldn't still be here." The religion holds that all life is driven by spiritual forces of natural phenomena like fire and wind, as well as of the dead, and that they should be honored through rituals. Animal sacrifices, trances ar vanishing acts are all part ovoodoo. But its followers insi there is a balance of good and ev bad comes to those who have n been good.

passes a 10-year plan for Egged's restructuring, stems from an August meeting at which Egged and the government explored ways for the bus company to be run more profitably.

"The changes will allow the company to become more efficient, provide the public with better service and belp Egged improve its financial standing." said Egged's spokesman Ron Radner, adding that for the next 10 years Egged's expenses are expected to decrease by two percent annually.

In September. Egged announced that its 1994 net profits totaled NIS 63.6 million, marking the company's sixth profitable year since implementing reforms in

Net profits, however, dropped 33% compared with 1993. The government will give Egged NIS 120m. this year to compensate the company for that amount in last revenues brought on by a decrease in the number of passengers. The government will completely stop its financing of the company by the year 2000.

Egged employs more than 8,000 workers, same 4,000 nf whom are members of the collective.

'Plan to stem exit of capital from provident funds won't reverse trend soon'

THE government's decision to formulate new proposals to reduce the flight of capital from provident funds is a step in the right direction, but is not likely in the near future to reverse the trend of withdrawals, fund managers said yesterday. The fund managers reacted to Insurance Commissioner Doron Shorer's announcement that the Treasury is working on a plan to encourage savings in the economy and reduce the withdrawal of cash from the funds.

Fund managers forecast that fund withdrawals will reach about NIS I billion during the first few months of the year.

Last year, withdrawals from provident fuods totaled some NIS funds. This is already an improvement in the government's treatment of provident funds. In the past, there was virtually oo public reference to the funds."

Shorer said the Treasury plans to ease investment regulations pertaining to provideot funds and insurance companies in an attempt to create additional investment routes.

There are also plans to allow funds to engage in leading transactions of securities in order to execute "sbort" transactions. This is intended to contribute to the funds' earnings.

"The actual measures will not lead to an immediate solution to the public's withdrawals from the funds, since the proposals do not mean anything to the public," Saguy said. "For example, what does the Maof mean to the general public? But the proposals are expected tn influence the ability of provideot fund managers to improve yields, since it gives us more free-

According to Saguy, an improvement in funds yields is expected to discourage the public from withdrawing their mooey from them. Saguy emphasized that Shorer bas not yet submitted bank fund managers with a draft proposal.

The Treasury also plans to raise provideot fund investments abroad to 5% of their total assets from the current 2%. Provident fund managers said the increase will prove ineffective as long as investments abroad remaio sub-

Why should we invest abroad if we have to pay a 35% tax oo our earnings, one provident fund manager said. "We prefer to invest in Israel.

Even now, we bave less than 2% invested abroad" The Treasury is also examining a proposal to allow fund savers to use liquid fuods as collateral to receive credit. Shorer said he is not troubled by the public's escape from the provident fuods in 1995, since the rate of savings in the economy has not decreased. More than NIS 6 billion was withdrawn from the funds since the start of 1995. The exit from the funds is a oatural occurrence, since about 60% of the money in the funds is liquid." Shorer said.

"In addition, 80% of the money was transferred ioto the saviog funds and other saving

Rising bank shares lift indexes

TEL AVIV STOCK MARKET

FELICE MARANZ

Two-Sided index

INDEXES rose for a second day yesterday, boosted by rising bank shares.

Bank Hapoalim went up for a second day, gaining 2.25 percent. Earlier this week, the bank announced it was negotiating to sell a stake in Ampal-American Israel Corp., a local investment company traded in New York to the Steinmetz family.

"Investors are expecting the bank to have capital gains from the Ampal sale," said Eitan Shtarkman, a fund managet at Ramat Gan investment firm Zeler Aviagon. The bank would not specify the transaction's valne, saying it would be higher than the market value,

The Maof Index rose 0.23% to 211.98, and the Two-Sided Index increased 0.28% to 203,73. Of 992 issues trading across the exchange, nearly twice as many shares rose as fell.

More than NIS 72 millioo worth of shares traded, NIS 9.8m. below Tuesday's level and NIS 13m. below the average daily trading level last week.

Banking shares rose amid fading concern over accusations that banks have inflated the amount of money due them from

On Monday, addressing a press conference in Jerusalem, Bank of tsrael Governor Jacob Frenkel cleared the banks of "systematic wrongdoing" in calculating the kibbutz debt.

"The kibbutz debt issue is calming down," said Shtrakman. This gives banks momentum.

Other gaining banking shares on the Maof Index included Bank Leumi, which rose 0.35%; and First International Bank, which went up 2.25%.

First International, which does not hold kibbutz debt, rose as investors "expect good earnings reports, said Shtarkman.

Share indexes also increased as the dollar gained against the shekel. Exporters, who pay expenses in shekels and earn in dollars, benefit from increasing profit as the shekel weakens.

Other gaining shares on the index included Osem Investments, which increased 0.75%. "Foreign investors are looking for a strategic investment in Osem, Shtarkman said.

Chemical shares rose for a third day after Makhteshim Chemical Works and Agan Chemical Manufacturers announced they had jointly purchased a stake in Brazilian pesticide company in 8 bid to expand their busioess in South America.

Makhteshim rose 0.75% aod Agan increased 2.75%.

Euro bourse rally boosted by Wall Street

WORLD MARKET ROUNDUP

LONDON (Reuter) - European stock markets ended higher yesterday after a shaky start, getting a late fillip from Wall Street which was up 50 points at the end of the Europeao tradiog day, dealers said.

European bourses had turned around even before Wall Street

Frankfurt, for example, started 3.5 points off, but the DAX Index ended the official session up 0.36 percent at 2,391.12. Prices powered further ahead in after-hours business. Dealers said Germao stocks could go much higher if M3 money supply data expected later this week hold out hopes for another inter-"If the M3 figures turn out half decent, then we could see some real bargain-hunting on the market," said one trader, meaning by "half-decent" M3 growth of less than the eight percent predicted by some traders earlier in the week.

The London stock market had a similar turnaround.

Paris, too, rallied to end 0.23% higher, with the bourse getting a shot in the arm from news the government planned to privatize electronics group Thomson.

Elsewhere, the spotlight was on gold, which slumped below $400 an ounce, and on the South African rand, which hit another record low.

Gold was fixed at $396.80 an ouoce oo Wednesday afternoon, the first fix below $400 since January 19.

But some analysts felt gold return to the market after Chinese New Year celebrations cod.

"More than half of the world's bovers are on holiday this week. It's always one of the worst weeks of the year," said Rhona O'Connell, analyst at stockbrokers T. Hoare and Company.

The rand fell below four to the dollar for the first time ever and hit a record low of 4.03 before steadying at around 3.86 after the South African central bank stepped in.

The rand has been weak since the end of last week on groundless rumors that President Nelson Mandela was ill, and on speculation about the lifting of exchange controls.

The run on the rand has taken the focus off the dollar, which was fairly steady for most of vesterday at just above 105 yen and 1.45 marks.

The market remains bearish on the dollar but dealers are wary about pushing it down at the moment, especially after a stronglyworded warning from the Bank of Japan.

"We will not tolerate a strong yer," a Bank of Japan official said. "Those who had sold dollars at recent lows have got their fingers burnt. Those who sell dollars

Bargain hunters send Dow Jones higher

WALL STREET REPORT

NEW YORK (Reuter) - The Dow Jones industrial average bounced back yesterday as bargain hunters re-emerged one day after the blue-chip index plummeted on the back of a sharp rise in long-term interest rates.

Based on early and unofficial data, the Dow Jones index closed 57.44 points higher at 5,515.97. in the broader market, advancing issues swamped declines by a 2-1 margin on active volume of 431 million shares on the NYSE.

Capriati wins in comeback

ESSEN, Germany (AP) -Returning trinmphantly to a tennis circuit she quit in despair, Jennifer Capriati breezed to a first-round win yesterday in her first tournament in 15 months.

Caprian emerged from a slide into tennis burnout, teenage rebellion and drug rehabilitation to overwhelm seventh-seeded Kristie Boogert of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-2 at the WTA indoor tournament in Essen.

The 19-year-old American was in astounding form, willing herself to her first victory in two and a half years with aggressive play. Boogert, ranked 32nd in the world, hardly knew what hit her. Capriati's on-court tension melted away into a heard smile. melted away into a broad smile when she claimed victory after 51 minutes. "It means a world to me," she said at the winner's news conference. "I just couldn't wait to get back to playing. It was fun." Also smiling was Capriati's father, Stefano, who watched his daughter's long-awaited triumph from the side of the court.

Capriati, who began training for a comeback last summer, made up for a tentative serve and occasional easy misses with precise returns and double-fisted backhand win-

Though Capriati's forehand was sometimes as hard as Steffi Graf's, "sometimes I had the feeling that she had no clue where she was hitting, just hitting everything hard," Boogert said. It was only Capriati's second match since she dropped off the tour in 1993 after a first-round loss at the US Open and headed into drugs and brushes with the Boogert, who appeared lost on the court, was no serious measure of Capriati's form. But clearly Capriati showed promise in her attempt to restart a career that began with at age 13 in 1990.

lo today's second round, she is due meet Barbara Schett, a 19year-old Austrian ranked 56th on the WTA list.

Capriati had planned her return last week at the Paris Opeo but withdrew at the last minute, citing a pulled muscle.

The $450,000 Essen indoor tournament then offered her a wild-card invitation.

A long struggle seems abead for the former teenage tennis sensa-tion once ranked No. 6 in the world hut now off the list. Unlike Monica Seles upon her return. Capriati got no special treatment from the WTA and will have to work ber way up through the rankings.

Capriati had the element of surprise on her side.

"I had no clue what to expect," said Boogert. The first three games I was more looking at her and how she was playing. Then 1 finally knew how she was playing, because she was hitting winners all over the place."

"She was hitting the ball great."

Israel tops Lithuania in friendly

ISRAEL emerged 4-2 victors over Lithuania in last night's friendly international played before a paltry crowd of some 3,000 at Kiryat Eliezer.

The play on the Haifa field reflected the lack of atmosphere in the stadium, with both sides stretched to come up with anything resembling a creative idea.

Shomo Scharf's men generally had the better of the play against a weakened Lithuanian lineup which did not include players earning their bread and hutter in other domestic leagues. Nevertheless the man entrusted with guiding Israel through the next World Cup qualifiers will be disappointed with his squad's showing against a side that let the Israelis come at them. Les Kershaw, the Manchester United scout was equally unimpressed by what he witnessed, stating after the match that "while a number of the Israeli players showed some skill and flair, the game was simply not competitive enough for me to make any reliable assessment about any player." Kershaw noted the contribution of Israeli midfielders Haim Revivo, Eyal Berkowitz and Itzik Zohar. but felt Gadi Brumer - whose name has been specifically linked with United - had so little to do in the game, that there was no likelihood that he would be recommending his purchase al present.

After a cautious opening, Israel began to take the game forward through the Hapoel Haifa pairing of Tal Banin and Reuven Atar. Atar found goal in the 23rd minute, heading home a parry by Lithuanian goalkeeper Darius Spetlya from a Revivo close range shot. Eight minutes later, Banin joined in the act, rifling home a careless clearance from a corner into the roof of the visitor's goal. The Israelis became too casual and quickly paid the price allowing Darius Maciulevius to pull back a goal a minute later. The play stuttered during the second balf following a host of substitutions by Scharf. Itzik Zohar, who replaced Berkowitz took time to find his feet but finally injected some life into the proceedings with a fierce long-range blast that found goal in the 75th

Ten minutes later, Alon Hazan skirted down the right flank and crossed true into the path of substitute Amir Turjeman, who slotted in Israel's fourth. The jubilation was muted when Lithuania hit a secood goal in the 89th minute through Gintarus Rimkus, to remind home fans that despite the scoreline, this was not one of

Maccabi TA trounces Rishon to reach State Cup semifinals

AHRON SHAPIRO

EVEN though Maccabi Rishon Lezion wasn't responsible for Maccabi Tel Aviv's elimination from European playoff contention last week, Tel Aviv took out its frustrations on the Rishon club last night anyway, in a 102-72 rout in the second leg of the State Cup quarter-finals.

The 30-point romp leapfrogged Tel Aviv into the semifinals, erasing a 13-poiot deficit inflicted upon them by the Rishoo cluh io the first leg.

In other quarter-final action, Hapoel Jerusalem beat Ra'anana 97-77, and Boei Herzliya slipped by Hapoel Eilat 77-74. Jerusalem and Herzliya advance to the semis. In the final game last night, Maccabi Netanya edged Hapoel Galil Elyon 80-79, but it wasn't enough to overcome the firstround deficit; Galil advanced. A draw will determine the semifinal opponents. In Yad Eliyahu, Tel Aviv's startmg liceup put forth one of its most consistent performances of the season. Naday Henefield was flawless, shooting a remarkable 11-for-11 to rack up 22 points. Tom Chambers, who picked up four fouls and spent large segments of the game on the side-lines, chipped in 20 points of his own on sharp shooting.

Rishoo Lezion, which never seemed to put enough defensive pressure on the Tel Avivans, had only a couple of performers. Brian Oliver led with 17 points. James Gully and Kobi Baloul also put some decent effort into an overall lackluster outing.
Zvi Scharf's Maccabians came on strong from the tip-off onwards. Henefeld shot consistently from the field, as did most of the Maccabi starters. The team led 20-10 after eight minutes.

Rishon Lezion staged its only serious rally of the game at that point - Baloul and Oliver providing the offensive pressure - and Rishon pulled as close as 22-18 before Tel Aviv got back into its rhythm.

Tel Aviv showed steady composure throughout the first half. Missing were spectacular shots and blocks. Instead of the flash, the team took a conservative tack y to their game, aided by a Rishon a squad that spent more time arguing fouls than putting their heads in the game.

Going into the half behind 48-27. Roni Bosani lay into his team with a vengeance, but to no avail. With 10 minutes left in the game, down 74-47, the Rishonis had already begun to fall apart, taking wild shots and making more fouls. As Rishon fell apart, Tel Aviv played more relaxed, and surprisingly continued to score as well as ever, as Brad Leaf, Oded Katash and Doron Jamchee took their shots, with some accuracy.

career record for assists almost a year ago, entered the game with 2,309 steals, one shy of the record Cheeks huilt in 15 seasons. Stockton, an eight-time All-Star in his 12th year, will play for the US Olympic squad this summer after making the Dream Team in Barcelona four years ago. Averaging 1.68 steals per game this season, Stockton tied the mark with 5:08 left in the second quarter when he slapped a pass from the hands of Eric Montross to learnmate Antoine Carr. Alvin Robertson of Toronto is third on the steals list with 2,050 and Chicago's Michael Jordan is fourth with 1,958. The NBA didn't begin counting steals as an official statistic until 1973. On February 1, 1995, Stocktoo surpassed Magic Johnsoo's NBA record for assists. Stockton leads with an average of 11.3 per game and is hidding for his ninth consecurive assists title. He also is the only guard among the top 10 in JEREMY Clarkson is back on the road. The BBC's everyman car aficiooado, who neatly avoids the traps of cultish motorheads and fussy consumer advocates, is once again traveling the world in search of new automotive sensations,

In Monte Carlo, he chats with a har owner about the good old days when Grand Prix drivers were as serious about partying as about racing, In Cuba, he hires a team of creative local mechanics to resuscitate a befinned American gas-guzzler once owned by Che Guevara.

Clarkson's eclectic approach throws a narrowly focused but revealing light on various societies around the world. And he's a lot of fun. Jerenty Clarkson's Motorworld can be seen on BBC World today at 11:30 a.m., Friday at 6:30 p.m., Saturday at 11:30 p.m. and Sunday at 4:40 p.m.

Panel: Replace Communications Ministry

THE Communications Ministry should be dissolved and most of its responsibilities transferred to n new National Telecommunications Authority suited to the rapid changes in this sector. These were the main recommendations of the Boaz Committee, established a year ago by Communications Minister Shulamit Aloni, who received its report and endorsed it in principle vesterday.

At a press conference at the Knesset. Aloni said it was merely a coincidence that her decision to retire from politics coincided with the recommendation to shut down her ministry.

Aloni said the proposed sevenmember authority would be run hy professionals.

The committee recommended that a team to establish the authority should be appointed no later than January 1, 1997, and that their proposals should be brought before the government within six months.

"I hope the government will decide on this matter very soon, followed by legisladon to arrange it," Aloni said. As for what would happen to the 110 employees in the ministry, the minister said it was still "too early" to discuss this, but that previous precedents show that the rights of workers whose ministries were abolished have not been harmed. David Boaz, a former senior Finance Ministry official who is now an independent consultant, prepared the 150-page report along with lawyer David Tadmor and Yitzhak İsh-Hurvitz, a former Communications Ministry direc-tor-general and Tadiran Communications managing director; he is now a Tel Aviv University researcher. Three Communications and Finance Ministry officials were observers at the committee.

Boaz noted that the telecommunications field around the world bas undergone change at a dizzying pace in the past decade, and that many governments realized their hureaucracies were too conservarive and too slow to control it. The changes in telecommunications in the coming years will be no less momentous than the Industrial Revolution, said the committee, and these will significantly change the way we work and live.

Various telecommunications services, including telephone, computer data transfer, cable TV and videoconferencing have become intertwined, and various suppliers can provide more than one type. The committee members explained that telecommunications has become a very technical field requiring special expertise, and that the ministry has little ability to collect information on those it supervised or enforce the laws. "The ministry hasn't developed a general policy within its fields of activity, and its manpower is very limit-

The committee stressed that what they recommended is not privatizaoon or deregulation of telecommunications services. "Establishing an authority, even if independent, constitutes a ruling body in all aspects." It does not mean the transfer of property, economic activity or authority from the government to the private sector, they stated. The postal services would not be included, they said.

Liba'i requests delay on conversion bill

THE Knesset yesterday postponed voting on the preliminary reading of a bill initiated by MKs from the religious parties aimed at pre-venting recognition of Reform and Conservative conversions performed in Israel.

Sixteen MKs were signed on the hill, drafted in response to a High Court decision to allow the Knesset to decide whether such conversions would be recognized for civil registration purposes. But the hill was withdrawn yesterday at the request of Justice Minister David Liba'i who said the ministerial committee established following the coun decision had yet to present its findings. According to a statement by the haredi parties the religious public fears the status quo on religious issues is being endangered and "the people divided, heaven forbid."

MK Yigal Bihi (Naoonal Religious Party)

described Reform conversions as "instant

"It will more difficult to join a football team than be accepted by the Jewish people if Reform conversions will be automatically recognized without any religious supervision or the endorsement of the Chief Rabbinate in Israel." Bibi said.

"The Conversion Law would crudely define orthodoxy and in effect allow the Rabbinical Court of Appeals to control our lives." said Communications Minister Shulamit Aloni.

Another hill, aimed at those considered halachically unable to marry, failed preliminary reading. The bill, initiated by MK Benny Temkin (Mererz), would have obliged the state to refund couples forced to marry abroad because the Israeli rabbinate won't marry

The hill failed to pass due to the absence of coalition MKs in the plenum while the religious and Likud MKs turned out in force.

Deri asks court for police notes on meeting with journalist

MK ARYEH Deri yesterday asked the Supreme Court to order the state to give him the police's notes from their meetings with Yediot Aharonoi journalist Mordechai Gilat. Deri's attorney, Dan Avi-Yitzhak, noted that the defense had not even known such meetiogs took place until Monday, when prosecution witness Cmrd. Meir Gilboa admitted during crossexaminadoo that there had been several such meetings, at which Gilat gave the police information and material. Gilboa told the Jerusalem District Court that these oteetings were devoted endrely to the Den investigation, and that he had made notes during them.

EVELYN GORDON

Avi-Yitzbak therefore asked to see all the material relating to these meetings, but the prosecutioo refused, saying it was intelligence information and did not relate to the investigation.

Judges Ya'acov Zemah. Miriam Naor and Moussia Arad then rejected the request, without even examining the material, so Deri appealed to the Supreme Court.

Avi-Yitzhak noted that since no certificate has been issued declaring the material classified, the fact that it is intelligence information is not enough to prevent the defense from seeing it.

This material is important, be added, because one of the questions in the trial has been why Deri refused to cooperate with the police. Den's answer has been that he could not trust the police when they were leaking information regularly to the press. and particularly to Yediot.

Gilat published several detailed articles about the investigation while it was in progress.

Furthermore, Avi-Yitzhak

argued, the lower court's decision was technically illegal, because it was made by the three-judge panel hearing the case. By law, be said, such decisions are supposed to be made by a single judge who is not sitting on the case.

Unions step up fight against pension settlement

MICHAL YUDELMAN

THE large trade unions yesterday intensified their work disruptions as part of their campaign against the new pension settlement, formulated by the Treasury and the Histadrut which, according to the unions, significantly reduces the workers' pensioo rights.

. At the same time, representa-tives of the unions and the Histadrut opeoed negotiations with Finance Ministry officials.

Thousands of Israel Aircraft Industry workers attended a large protest meeting at LAI's Lod plant at which IAI union head Haim Katz explained the unions position. Earlier in the day, Bezeq offices stopped receiving the public and cut information services for two hours, and civilian IDF employees beld protest meetings at their bases. Katz charged the Treasury with violatiog all the understandings in the pension settlement which the unions, had reached, with the Histadrut. "When we received the opinion of the Histadrut's social security division head on the peosion settlement, we were stunned. Nothing remained of all the agreements we had reached Histadrut," he said. Histadrut Chairman Amir Peretz also attended the meeting. Peretz admitted that some of the unions' complaints are justified, although organizational measures. After the meeting with Treasury officials, Peretz said he is satisfied that "there is an agreement on freezing the new pension regulations for veteran members of the pension funds. At any rate, the new pension settlement has not been enacted yet." However, the union representatives were disappointed with the meeting. Katz said that "the meet ing was not serious, and consisted of a declaration of intentions only. We did not bear an unequivocal commitment to revoke all the new pension regulations."

The unions are expected to stop their sanctions for a few days to give the negotiations with the Treasury a chance, but will probably resume measures afterward.

WHEN a Romanian Nazi tried to extract his money from a Swiss bank more than 30 years ago, the bank declined, saying it could not verify the account because it had destroyed the records.

The bank's statement, in a letter recently uncovered in Bucharest archives, casts suspicion on how the Swiss calculate the value of dormant Jewish accounts.

The Swiss hanks contend they hold only $32 million in dormant Jewish accounts. That amount has been challenged as too tow, and the World Jewish Restitution Organization has assailed the Swiss MARILYN HENRY NEW YORK account: "Anome 640." The bank said it could not find holdings in either his or the code

"Research dating back to 1944 is unfortunately not feasible, since any relevant business files have long since been destroyed," the bank said in a letter to Lecca dated April 30, 1963. Destruction of bank records is questionable under Swiss law. More important, it also puts into question the banks' ability to come up with reliable figures about dormant accounts precisely because A World Jewish Congress dele-
